

Gain Beauty

And keep it—as I did.
By Edna Wallace Hopper.

As a girl, I multiplied my beauty until it brought me world-wide fame. After 40 years in a stage career, I have kept that beauty. To the thousands who see me daily I look like a girl of 19.

That is due to cultivation and to scientific care. Not to ordinary beauty helps. I have spent years and fortunes to secure the utmost science offers.

Now I have had those helps combined so a dozen are applied at once. And I am placing them at every woman's call.

One is a super-cream. It is supplied by all druggists and toilet counters as Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Cream.

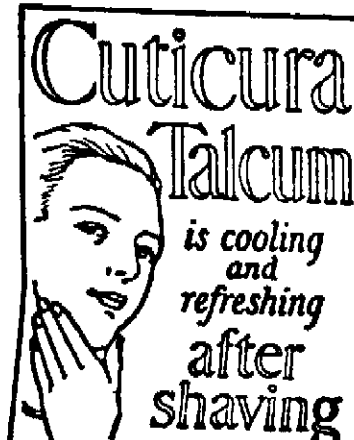

It is far more than a cream. It contains products of both lemon and strawberry. Also all the best that modern experts know to foster softness, feed and protect the skin. In one application I cannot believe that there exists another beauty help to compare.

My Youth Cream comes in two types—cold cream and vanishing. They contain the same important ingredients. I use the cold cream as a night cream, the vanishing in the day. Never is my face one hour without it. The result is a complexion for 40 years admired.

I wish I knew how to induce all girls and women to adopt this super-cream. It means so much to them. I will gladly send you some to try if you will mail this coupon. Please do that if you wish to know how much a cream can do.

Simple Dress Is Milady's Choice

Prefers Little Frock That Can Be Worn All Day, Yet Look Well.

That simplicity is a difficult achievement is what most women know. The little frock that can be worn all day long and yet look well, the one-piece dress that is equally at home in the office or at lunch at some smart restaurant—this is the type of dress that seems almost impossible to find, notes a fashion writer in the Kansas City Star.

An excellent example of the type of dress that is equal to almost any occasion is one of black satin. It is cut on the becoming coat dress lines and has the new surplice neck, a line that women will welcome joyfully, it is so flattering to most figures.

The surplice collar and the side opening of the dress are cocoa brown crepe de chine. The narrow bands that outline the hem are of the same material. The scarf, without which no self-respecting frock is seen nowadays, has bands of the brown crepe de chine at either end. A small cocoa brown felt hat trimmed with three small flowers, brown stockings and black patent leather pumps complete this costume of a well dressed woman.

Plaid promises to play an important part in the winter's mode. Plaid coat drawers that are open to the waist with a plaited frill of batiste or organdie are exceedingly smart. Another little three-piece costume is of black and white wool cheviot trimmed with red braid and small white buttons. Plaids also appear in silk materials as well as in woolen ones and indeed it bids fair to be a plaid season. Surely nothing could be more attractive for the schoolgirl than the slim little one-piece dress of dark blue with a huge hood-like cape lined with plaid.

Sleeves and Necklines on New Fall Garments

Sleeve styles for fall wear are varied, notes a correspondent in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. There is the long, close-fitting sleeve terminating in a bishop puff with a tight cuff, the gathered lower part often being of a contrasting material. Then there is the long sleeve with the fullness above the elbow, something like the old-time mushroom puff, and the long one which is wide below the elbow. Then, of course, there is the frock with no sleeves at all, but it is usually of an evening or dinner type.

Necklines, too, are a bit different. There are high collars which fasten either at the side or the front, director collars with frilled jabots and scarf collars which are adjusted in a variety of ways. Necklines are cut in a V or a square, or are rounded, but the buttons is seldom seen. For evening, the neckline is lower in the back than in the front, the décolletage often extending to the waistline in the back.

The cape wrap is decidedly in vogue for evening. Full or of a three-quarter length, it is developed in both fabric and fur. Street wraps are either straight of line or show a circular flare or a godet skirt.

Actually, while styles in general seem not to have changed as very much, there are new features introduced which promise a decided change in a few seasons to come.

New Combs for Bobbed Hair

French combs with fine teeth have been designed for the wayward frayed bobbed lock in a variety of shapes, round, square and oval. These may be had plain or encrusted with rhinestones. A practical bobbed haircut is made all in a piece in a double-curving curve which grasps the hair securely without catch.

Prices in Bible Days

Abraham paid 400 shekels of silver ($200) for a piece of land for a burying place. In Solomon's time (1 Kings 10:29) it is mentioned that the price of a chariot in Egypt was 400 shekels of silver ($200). The price of a horse was 120 shekels ($60) ($72).

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAM-BONNER

STUBBORN CAKE MIXTURE

"Once we're mixed together," said the flour in the big yellow bowl in the kitchen, "we're mixed together. We are stubborn then. If some one says: 'Oh, dear, but I've put too much flour in there, I won't come out of the mixture once I'm in.' Then perhaps someone may put too much baking powder in the mixture or too much butter or shortening, or perhaps more than the pinch of salt intended to be put in—once we're all in we're there to stay."

"It is true that sometimes other things are added, or more of some of us may be added to try to make the mixture taste all right, but it is a difficult thing when once we've all been mixed together to do much about us. You see we're so friendly. We've been beaten up together and we feel as though we're of the same big cake family."

"Then, too, we feel that we'd be so well introduced that it would be rude for any of us to leave each other after such a thorough meeting."

"You see, after the butter and the flour and all of the rest have been stirred around together and have become so very friendly it would not appear at all well if suddenly some of the flour got up and left the rest of the crowd."

"Nor would it be polite if some of the baking powder got up and said: 'You've got to excuse me. I have an engagement with another cake mixture.'"

"Nor would it be nice if the salt said: 'Dear me, but I don't want to be here. I'm going to take myself away so I can go in the oatmeal cooking at the other side of the stove.'"

"Why we would all think it was dreadful to be so rude. We would all think that that would show we didn't like each other much."

"That is one of the reasons why we won't leave a mixture once we're all together."

"Another reason is that it would be very clumsy."

"Another reason is that people should be more careful. They have us at their mercy."

"They can put just as much of us together as they wish. But once they have done that, then we have them pretty much at our mercy."

"We can decide—in fact we do decide—that no matter what happens we will stick together."

"Another reason why we won't leave a mixture once we're mixed is because we're tired after having been stirred around so hard."

"Maybe a person thinks her arm is tired from stirring but we're tired too. We want to settle down and rest. We don't want to be rushing off somewhere right away."

"That is another reason."

"Then, still another is because we're stubborn. We aren't going to give in. We're going to punish them for their carelessness and we're going to punish them by being stubborn."

"We're not going to make them go into corners and stand there. We're not going to make them sit still in punishment chairs, we're not going to make them wear dance caps or stay in from playing or any of those things."

"We're going to punish them by being stubborn."

"Yes, the lady who has been mixing us has put a little too much salt in, but will the salt do anything about it to help?"

"No, indeed."

"That is what has happened, and that is why there is a delay. She is wondering what to do next or how she can improve matters."

"Yes, the flour ended, 'that is the reason for the delay. Our stubborn ways punishing a lady's carelessness.'"

Compelled to Defend

Charles' parents had forbidden him to play in the street, but told him he could play on the sidewalk.

One day his father caught him riding in his automobile in the street. Calling him, he asked why he was disobeying.

"Well, daddy, don't a kid have to do what they are told when they are riding the sidewalk?"

In the Aggregate

"If you want right, my boy, take some one of your size."

"Well, pa, it amounted to the same thing this morning. I licked two boys each half as big as I was."

Ink From the Maple

A homemade ink was in earlier days sometimes made from the bark of the red maple by boiling it and adding sulphate of iron, says the American Tree Association. It contains considerable tannin, and, at one time, was occasionally employed in dyeing.

The KITCHEN CABINET

(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

It is when the trees are leafless, or when the last withered leaves rustle in the wintry air, creeping along the bare boughs like tremulous mice, or fluttering from the branches like tired and starving swallows left behind in the ebbing tides of migration that the secret of the forest is most likely to be surprised. Mystery is always there—Fiona Macleod.

HOME CANDY MAKING

There are few homes where the young people do not delight in making their own Christmas candies. Here are a few simple recipes that even the beginner will find easy to make.

Peanut Brittle.—Take two cupsful of granulated sugar, put into a smooth iron frying pan and set over the heat.

Stir constantly while it is melting and when a golden brown pour over a cupful of shelled peanuts which have been placed in a buttered dripping pan. Cool and break into pieces. For variety just before taking from the heat add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of soda, stir well then pour over the nuts. This is a peanut brittle which is not so hard and is liked better by many on that account.

Collage Cream.—Boil together one pound of brown sugar and one cupful of water until it hardens in water. Beat the white of an egg very stiff and pour the hot sugar over it, beating all the time; when it begins to be creamy add a half-cupful or more of broken nut meats.

Chocolate Caramels.—Put two and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter into a kettle; when melted add two cupfuls of molasses, one cupful of brown sugar and one-half cupful of milk. Stir until the sugar is dissolved and when the boiling point is reached add three squares of chocolate, stir constantly until the chocolate is melted. Boil until a firm ball can be gathered with the fingers from a drop, put into cold water. Add vanilla and turn into buttered pans to cool. Mark in squares before it is too hard.

Gloss.—This is a glaze which may be used for dipping fruit or nuts. Roll two cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of water and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar to 200 degrees Fahr. without stirring. Check the heat by placing the saucepan in cold water, then immediately place it in a pan of boiling water to keep the glaze in condition for dipping.

Preparing for Farmers' Week

Making Preparations to Beat Last Year's Attendance Record of 3,568 at Ithaca—New Features—Bailey Will Speak.

By Telegraph to The Freeman Ithaca, N. Y., Dec. 11.—Liberty Hyde Bailey, former dean of the state college of agriculture here, and the author of many books dealing with country life, will be one of the main speakers at the eighteenth annual Farmers' Week to be held here February 9 to 14, inclusive.

The farm management men at the college are working on an extensive exhibit which will feature the products of the various cooperatives all over the state. The rural education department is planning to feature the uses and possibilities of the state park system, the dairy department will cut and sell a 1,200 pound cheese now ripening in the dairy building, the plant breeding department will have a seed show, the students will have their part in the Eastman stage speaking contest and the Kernis play, and the whole college will be on exhibition for the week.

Last year Ulster county was represented by 13 visitors at this annual affair, and with this year's attractions, authorities at the college feel that last year's total attendance figure will at least be equalled if not increased this winter.

Must Pay Tuition Of Rural Pupil

State Commissioner of Education Decides Hearing on Tuition Does Not Outweigh Consideration of Losing the Educational Advantage for Which Rural District Pays.

A decision of importance to rural school districts has been handed down by State Commissioner of Education Frank P. Graves in an Ulster county case, the practical effect of which is that the cheapest high school tuition is not to outweigh the serious hardship which would follow to the pupil whose high school tuition is paid by the rural district, particularly where the hardship means the practical nullification of the high school advantage for which the district is paying.

The case arose in District No. 11 of the town of Marbletown, whose voters by a vote of six to five designated the Ellenville High School as the academic school for attendance of pupils from that district. The charge for non-resident tuition at the Ellenville High School is $10 more a year than the state tuition allowance. The Kingston High School non-resident tuition charge is $50 a year in excess of the state tuition. Pupils from District No. 11 would not reach Ellenville, twenty miles away, until noon, while they would be able to reach Kingston, fourteen miles distant, at nine o'clock in the morning, in time for school. The district has one high school pupil, Samuel Wilber, whose father appealed to the state commissioner of education. Commissioner Graves sustains the appeal, and sets aside the designation of the Ellenville High School and directs that the young man's tuition in Kingston High School be paid by the district.

Commissioner Graves' Decision.

The decision of Commissioner Graves in full is as follows:

The appellant, Abram Wilber, is a resident of common school district No. 11 of the town of Marbletown, Ulster county, and is the father of Samuel Wilber, a pupil of academic grade. At the annual meeting held in said district on May 6, 1924, the voters present, by a vote of six to five, designated the Ellenville High School as the academic school for the attendance of pupils residing in district No. 11 who are of academic grade. It is alleged that at the time of the taking of the appeal the appellant's son was the only pupil of such grade residing in the district.

The appellant shows that the Ellenville High School is about twenty-one miles from his residence, while the Kingston High School is about fourteen miles distant and can be reached each morning by bus which arrives at Kingston about 9 o'clock, and that the first available public conveyance that would reach Ellenville would arrive at about noon and too late for the morning session. It appears that the board of education of the Ellenville school charges tuition in excess of the state tuition in the amount of $10 per year for each academic pupil, while the Kingston High School charges an excess tuition of $50 per year. It is probable that this difference in tuition charge brought about the action of the district meeting in designating the school in which the lesser tuition charge is made. This in itself is not a sufficient reason to justify a designation, particularly where attendance at the designated school would work a serious hardship to the pupil or pupils involved.

The facts set forth in the appeal papers have not been controverted. I am satisfied upon the evidence submitted that it is impracticable, if not actually impossible, for appellant's son to attend the Ellenville High School and receive the instruction to which he is entitled. While the voters of the district have the power, under the provisions of subdivision 6 of section 493 of the education law, to designate an academic school for the instruction of the pupils of the district, their action is made subject to review by the commissioner of education on appeal, and this is clearly a case where the power of the commissioner should be exercised and the action of the district meeting should be set aside, thus leaving the pupil free to continue his attendance at the Kingston High School as if no designation had been made at the district meeting.

District No. 11 of the town of Marbletown will be responsible for the payment of the excess tuition charged for his instruction in the Kingston High School and it will become the duty of the trustee to pay such excess tuition, and he has full power under the statute to raise by tax a sufficient sum to pay the same.

The appeal is sustained. It is hereby ordered that the action of the annual meeting held in district No. 11 of the town of Marbletown, Ulster county, May 6, 1924, in designating the Ellenville High School as the academic school for the attendance of its pupils, be and the same is hereby set aside and vacated.

It is further ordered that the trustee of said district be and he is hereby directed to pay the tuition charged for the instruction of the appellant's son in the Kingston High School in excess of the amount of the state tuition that may be apportioned on account of his instruction under the provisions of the law.

League Buys Clover Farms

The Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., has purchased the properties and business of Clover Farms, Inc., an old established high grade milk distributing company in New York city, according to an announcement by G. W. Slocum, president of the dairy farmers' organization. The formal transfer will take place on Tuesday, December 16. The purchase is in line with the league's policy to obtain more and more of the best fluid markets for the milk of its members.

The league will retain the country properties consisting of seven modern milk receiving stations in New York state. It has contracted to sell the city holdings and retail business to Borden's Farm Produce Company, which is a 100 per cent buyer of league milk.

The Clover Farms' city properties include a large distributing plant at 470 West 128th street. Besides carrying on a retail business the company is serving milk to all of the City Department of Health infant feeding stations of which there are over 60. The company handles more grade "A" milk in proportion to its daily supply than any other concern in New York city.

Clover Farms, Inc., had its origin in November, 1891, as L. L. Campbell & Bro., starting in business with one lone milk wagon, the driver of which was L. L. Campbell. The first day's deliveries consisted of 68 quarts. The company now has 160 delivery routes.

Queen Victoria's Rule Over Royal Household

Princess Catherine Radziwill in a book, "Those I Remember," tells many stories of royalty.

Queen Victoria, says the princess, "was a martinet politically as well as socially."

The prince of Wales (King Edward) especially stood in awe of his parent, and when almost an old man himself he hardly ever opened his mouth in her presence.

"Her eldest daughter, the late Empress Frederick of Germany, used to say that whenever she was summoned to the queen's presence she first asked for a glass of water so as to conquer her emotion."

Queen Victoria, adds the princess, never appeared at state concerts or balls, but sometimes she would condescend to show herself at a garden party given by the prince and princess of Wales at Marlborough house.

She used to arrive late and was driven round the grounds in a little pony carriage, beside which her children dutifully walked, talking with her the whole of the time for Queen Victoria was not above a bit of gossip, and liked from time to time to be told the news of the day, especially if it dealt with the marriage of somebody she knew or the love affairs of some one she had met.

Nesting Habits of Crows

Crows build in trees, usually at a considerable height. The nests are made of small sticks and are lined with roots and the bark of trees and shrubs, especially the bark of grapevines.

From three to five eggs are laid, which hatch in about three weeks, and the young birds learn to fly when they are about one month old.

Take Childish Minds Off Dental Terrors

One of the dopes "when a feller needs a friend" most sorely is when he is led by an apprehensive mother into the dentist's office.

The modern method is to supply this same "feller" with a friend, or better, several friends, who will play about with him in a special room or outdoor area while waiting for his turn to come for the dentist's chair.

"Send the children to the dentist in groups," says Dr. Samuel Adams Cohen in Hygeia, health magazine, "and the visit will seem to the child an excursion of pleasure."

Doctor Cohen tells how for several years it has been the custom of a Boston dental infirmary to assemble children in groups in one large waiting room which is used as a playground. The children play games until summoned to the dental chair and their minds are diverted from the main purpose of their presence there. Games, toys, exhibits and miniature museums are used for the purpose.

Mystery of the Marshes

"Toothless Fire" is the translated name of the Latin ignis fatuus commonly known as "will-o'-the-wisp."

It is a light which appears floating in the atmosphere a few feet above the ground in marshes or other places where there is decaying animal matter. When approached it appears as a rule, to recede. It has been attributed to phosphoreted or carbonated hydrogen escaping from the decaying substances.

P-T. A. Plan to Help, Not Hinder

Curves No Battle Axes or Spears, and Is Not Designed to Interfere With School Administration. Writes State President—Activities of No. 4 Association.

The regular monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of School No. 4 was held in the school building Tuesday at 3:45 p. m. The meeting opened with a most interesting program furnished by pupils from the first grade. The first number was a group of songs by Miss May Decker's pupils of Grade 1B. Then followed a group of poems, mostly by Robert Louis Stevenson recited in unison by some of Miss Winifred Sullivan's pupils from Grade 1A. The pupils of 1B recited rhymes mostly from Mother Goose acting them out with fingers and hands. The closing number was the "Swing Song" by Robert Louis Stevenson and "Busy Body" sung by pupils of Grade 1A.

The president, Mrs. Charles Nickerson, read a message from the state president, Mrs. Frederick Hosmer of Auburn, telling some of the things Parent-Teacher Associations do not do, in response to questions asked her. She stated that Parent-Teacher Associations never interfere in any way in the school administration but always stand ready to give principal, superintendent or board of education their heartiest cooperation. Moreover, they do not start out with battle axes and spears to "clean up the town" or make aggressive attacks on anything, but the members are striving earnestly to become better parents, better teachers, better citizens and to think out right things for children and to work constructively and intelligently toward them.

A clearance of $30 was reported from the food sale and it was voted to furnish Christmas candy for all the downstairs grades. It was also voted to furnish glasses to a child needing them.

An article on "Publicity for Parent-Teacher Activities," from the New York State Parent-Teacher Bulletin was read by Mrs. Arthur Cragin and an article from Child Welfare Magazine, the National Parent-Teacher Bulletin, was read by Mrs. George Kent. The article entitled "Our Great Responsibility" was written by Katharine Chapin Higgins. Mrs. Higgins writes "Only as we cultivate a sense of universal responsibility in our associations and emphasize the relation of individual, good of the home, the church, the school, the state, the nation and the world, only as the future citizens are wise and far seeing in their judgments, will we be able to cope with the intricate problems which are sure to arise."

The next meeting will be held on the evening of January 13, 1925.

Horticultural News

BREEDING TO GET NEW STRAWBERRIES

Have you ever attempted to raise a fine patch of luscious strawberries such as you have seen pictured in nursery catalogues, and then had so small a crop that you received only a good taste? Experiences of this nature caused the horticultural department of the Nebraska experiment station to see whether new strains could not be produced which would be more adapted to Nebraska conditions. A series of experiments was begun in 1918, in an attempt to produce new varieties, by breeding methods, which would outyield our standard varieties and compare favorably with them in all other desirable qualities. Of 800 hybrid or crossed plants as a beginning, five strains have been saved for propagation and distribution.

Strawberries are propagated by runners because they will not breed true from seed. Seedling plants from pure seed probably would have shown as great variation as those from crossed seed, but the latter kind was used exclusively in the experiment. All of the promising hybrids saved were from crosses in which Enormous, Senator Dunlap, or Howard 17 was one of the parents.

The work of producing the hybrid seed was done in the greenhouse in winter. Pollen parts were removed from flowers of several plants of each standard variety and fertilized with the pollen from some other standard variety. Each of these 800 crosses was numbered and the seed planted in flats outside in the spring, and allowed to colonize to about 25 plants during that year.

Of these 181 of the best were saved and planted in matted rows 30 feet long the next two years. All but 40 of the new sorts were eliminated at that time. These were then grown in 40-foot matted rows with a row of some standard variety between each row for comparison. At the end of two more years the fruit from the 10 highest yielding ones was put in storage to test its keeping qualities. The fruit also was chemically tested for sugar, acid, and solids content in comparison with some standard variety.

Five of the new crosses outyielded Dunlap and other varieties at the Nebraska station, and proved to be equally favorable in hardiness, prolificacy, uprightness, color, flavor and other desirable qualities.

The new hybrids have not been named, for it is not known which ones will respond best under average middle western conditions of soil and climate.—Goner V. Jones, in the Nebraska Farm Journal.

Old Fruit Trees Stage Profitable Come-Back

To show the actual value in dollars and cents of taking care of home orchards, the extension service of Clemson college arranged last year to keep accurate records on a number of home orchards, where directions had been carried out. At the close it was found that the cash value of fruit produced averaged $302 per acre. None of these orchards had ever been sprayed before and none had ever been profitable in any way. For example, one home orchard demonstrator near Easley, South Carolina, had 98 trees. These trees were planted several years ago, but they had served no other purpose than as a support for the clothes line or as shade for a hammock on a hot summer afternoon. They furnished very small crops of fruit that were always wormy and worthless. Last year they were sprayed for the first time in their lives and their blossoms changed into fine fruit. The owner was proud of his achievement for he sold $233 worth of fruit, but best of all, the home of this farmer ceased to be a home where they had to buy fruit from a grocery store. Has your home orchard been producing crops of the value of $200 per acre? If not, why not?

Protecting Fruit Trees From Rabbits, Mice, Rats

The best method for protecting young fruit trees against rabbits and other animals which live above ground is to use rather fine mesh gravel screens, forming a cylinder around the base of the tree. Wooden boxes are sometimes built around the trees extending up to the lower branches and being about six inches square. If the trees are bothered by mice or rats, about the most effective remedy is to bring the earth up around the base of the tree to a height of about 12 or 14 inches. Even a better method is to poison or trap the mice or rats. A young orchard under clean cultivation is seldom bothered by animals.—Farm Life.

Horticultural Facts

Fresh fruit from your back yard? Why not?

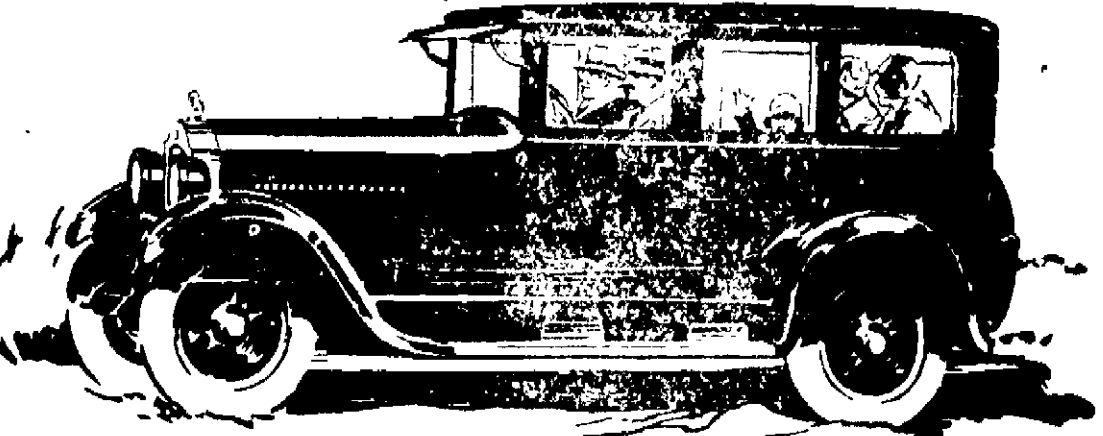

One rabbit can gnaw a dozen trees in a day unless precautions are taken to prevent it.

Rabbits attack trees that are from one to six years old; mice injure trees of any age. It is better and cheaper to protect the tree trunks now than to try to save gnawed trees next spring by bridge grafting.

Lozenges can be depended upon to bring quick relief from severe or chronic coughs and colds. It is better to take quickly dissolving lozenges than to wait until the cough has become a habit and is difficult to break.

THREE FRENCH EXAMPLES OF THE NARROW LINE.

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

The narrow line is a survival of the tubular affair to which designers, which have a tendency to be most of us, who are fond of the straight line, are inclined to cling. It is a survival of the straight line, which has been the main theme for evening. A dress may preserve, or produce, a narrow line, and still do extraordinary things at the hem—even be draped at the front, an arrangement very well liked.

In fact, even for street clothes, and certainly for sport ones, just waiting for the holiday jumble of things to be cleared away to appear, the straight line is in jeopardy. Godets keep occurring, tiers and ruffles and all sorts of circular movements persist so that our frocks are no longer the tubular affair to which designers, which have a tendency to be most of us, who are fond of the straight line, are inclined to cling. It is a survival of the straight line, which has been the main theme for evening. A dress may preserve, or produce, a narrow line, and still do extraordinary things at the hem—even be draped at the front, an arrangement very well liked.

Health Program In the Schools

Necessity of Thorough Physical Examination Stressed by Education Department Speaker—Parents' Consent Needed—Activities of P. T. A. of School No. 7.

On Tuesday afternoon about fifty women members of the Parent-Teacher Association of School No. 7 listened to a most interesting address on the health program of the schools of New York state by Dr. Florence Sherman, of the state department of education. Dr. Sherman said that the public and parents in general did not realize what a health program meant in Kingston. The school system employs the full time of a doctor and two nurses, which means that every child in the school system is entitled to a thorough physical examination. It is impossible to make the right kind of an examination without the consent of the parent. No physician can examine the heart and lungs of a patient through the clothing. Everywhere the physician is handicapped by the unwillingness of the parent to cooperate with him. Parents are sent notices of the physical defects of their children and they cannot afford to disregard those notices. If they do, their children are handicapped in health, in efficiency, in earning power. Already the normal schools are requiring their graduates to pass certain health tests. Each year an increasing number of employers are asking for health certificates from those whom they employ. The young medical students are receiving courses in preventive medicine, as well as in cures for ill. All of which goes to show that health education in schools is a very necessary thing.

Dr. Sherman also spoke at some length on foot hygiene. She emphasized the points that a child's shoe must be at least a half inch longer than the foot measures when the child is standing; that it should be broad enough to allow the foot to spread naturally; and that it should have a flexible sole.

The P. T. A. of No. 7 starts serving hot lunches free to its children after the Christmas recess. About 100 children are receiving the mid-morning milk. A victrola was purchased and shoes and rubbers for a needy child.

Christmas cheer is to be given to all the children in the lower grades. Mothers were asked to inform themselves as to the child labor law amendment and to be ready to discuss it at the evening meeting on January 13. A speaker will also be provided.

A GIFT DE LUXE.

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

To see ourselves as others see us, may be a poetical desire, but it often works out in real life as rather a disillusioning process. For instance, in the eyes of a Frenchwoman whose business is to create chic modes for her countrywomen—and, incidentally, for us—Americans do not pay enough attention to silhouette, and nothing like as much attention as we should to the proper ensemble of hat and costume.

It does seem as though her criticism was just one. Many women strive to get through a season with two hats, let us say, wearing them, of course, with several different costumes, most of which may be off key not only in color, but in the quality of the hat or costume pressed.

A dinner was given in New York, at which a well-known actor sat at the guest table. When the hour for starting the feast arrived the toastmaster a very religious man, discovered that no minister of the Gospel was present, though several had been invited. In this emergency he turned to the actor and asked him to say grace.

The actor rose, bowed his head, and in the midst of the deep hush, said fervently:

"There being no clergyman present, let us thank God!"

LAKE KATYNE. Lake Katrine, on 11—Mrs. Auley Roosa taught school one day recently, during the absence of the regular teacher, Mrs. Ennis.

Twelve members of Lake Katrine Grange motored to Clintondale last Friday to attend Pomona.

The minstrels were a great success, as an up-to-date entertainment and financially, $20 being netted for the Near East Relief and a good sum for the Sunday school. The boys are very proud of the invitation to repeat it at Mt. Marion on Wednesday evening, December 17.

Through the kindness of Mrs. Joel Brink, Miss Sheila, Mrs. H. Roosa, D. Kieffer, Miss S. Mantivani and Mrs. F. Brink, cars were furnished to enable the teachers and girls of the Sunday school to attend the lecture of Margaret Slatery on Sunday afternoon at Kingston.

TODAY WE CELEBRATE

"ROMA CAPITALE." Fifty-eight years ago today the French troops were withdrawn from Rome, and this action marked the first step in a series of events which led up to the realization of the dream of "Rome Capitale" of united Italy. In 1844, Napoleon had launched his brilliant plan for a United Italian Republic, and proclaimed the fall of the temporal power of the popes. In defending Rome against the armies sent to the aid of the pope by the Neapolitan king and the French emperor, Garibaldi covered the republic with glory, but a greater French army was despatched and the

Progressives Plan Labor Party

Believe LaFollette Campaign Demonstrated Need of New Political Alignment and Will Meet in Washington to Consider It.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Washington, Dec. 11.—Leaders of the progressive movement which supported the independent presidential candidacy of Senator Robert M. LaFollette, of Wisconsin, were gathered in Washington today for the meeting tomorrow of the executive committee of the Conference for Progressive Political Action.

Under instructions from its convention last June, the committee is charged particularly with making recommendations on the establishment of a permanent new third party in the United States.

Four major things are to be considered by the committee, William M. Johnston, chairman and president of the International Association of Machinists, announced today. These are: 1. Issuance of a call for another national convention of the conference.

2. Review of the LaFollette campaign. 3. Recommendations for the establishment of a third party. 4. Recommendations for participation in national and state elections.

Johnston believes the LaFollette campaign demonstrated the need of a new political alignment and that the "time is now ripe for the launching of a new party movement composed chiefly of the American workers and other progressive minded citizens."

LaFollette has a cold. He may not attend the session but will be in constant consultation with committee members. He will oppose any move by the committee other than drafting recommendations to be laid before the next convention. He believes that the convention itself, not the committee, should be the body charged with definitely bringing out and giving life to the new party.

"We did not want the endorsement of the American Federation of Labor," said Johnston. "Although we realize that the backbone of our movement will be supplied by the working classes. This is to be a movement of individual men and women, not of organizations. After we get going we are confident labor organizations will support our candidates. This is not to be strictly a labor party."

MAJOR LEAGUES' JOINT MEETING TODAY.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, Dec. 11.—With the commissioner's chair vacant, the major leagues will hold an "informal" joint meeting today to determine when and where the official gathering will take place. Some discord is expected on this point as it is understood that the National League wishes to conduct the meeting at Chicago on Saturday while the American Leaguers are holding out for a date some time in January.

Leslie M. O'Connor, secretary to Judge Landis, who was unable to appear at the current meetings owing to the illness of his wife, will represent the commissioner at the conclave this afternoon.

Mrs. Stanley J. Matthews, chairman of the welfare committee of the American Legion Auxiliary, requests all members to be present at the armory Friday evening, December 12, at 8 o'clock. This meeting is for the purpose of taking care of the annual Christmas cheer for ex-service men.

The ladies are asked to bring thimble, darning needle, scissors and colored yarn. The committee is desirous of securing the names of any ex-service men who are disabled to any extent. Telephone 2164 or 663.

NEW DEPARTMENT PLAN LAID AWAY FOR YEAR

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Washington, Dec. 11.—The movement toward establishing a new department of education and public welfare, under a secretary with a seat at the cabinet table, has been definitely laid away for another year. It was learned today.

Representative Dillinger, Republican of Massachusetts, who has introduced a bill in Congress to create the new department has decided not to press it at this session.

Yanderlyn Improving.
John N. Vanderlyn, the well-known attorney-at-law of New York, who, because of a severe attack of acute indigestion, early Monday morning was in a serious condition, is reported by people from New York to be greatly improved.

One Fundamental Principle

By J. B. M. CLARK

WHEN Kate Ogilvie heard privately that it was the pretty girl in Rev. Mr. Haywood's choir who had thrown over an admirer on the strength of advice from "Molly Molloy" of the "Heartsease" page of the Montreal Weekly Meteor, she experienced a sudden distaste for her job. For she herself was Molly Molloy, and had heretofore given counsel on affairs of the heart with a zest that the subsequent enthusiasm of the recipients invariably whetted, and which was rarely dampened by untoward happenings.

In this particular case, on the testified diffidence and lack of resolution of a needy suitor, she had advised bringing an unsatisfactory "understanding" to an end and the accepting of a wealthy, if elderly, admirer. And the passionate cry of the discarded one: "To h—l with Molly Molloy! You might have given me a white man's chance to make good!" borne through strange channels to her ears, made her so sick at heart that she threw up a good position and went to visit an old college chum in Los Angeles. Later, liking the new environment, she sought to re-enter the newspaper world, but finding conditions difficult in the Pacific coast city, went to a dry goods store as a bookkeeper. And there, in the course of the following year, she made the acquaintance of Charlotte Bosbyshell and Richard Appleton.

Charlotte Bosbyshell (known as "Bobby") was twenty-one years of age and reasonably attractive, but having no steady beau was obsessed by the bleakness of the outlook. She had been in the receiving department for two years. Appleton, who had drifted down from Seattle or somewhere in the North, was understood to be aiming at the "movies." He was nearer thirty than twenty and was of a studious turn. Bobby decided that he would suit her and she strove to captivate him, even seeking advice from Waddington, the married head of the department.

"Well, I can't help you," said Waddington. "Whom do you want to vaim now?"

"Oh, no one special," replied Bobby truthfully. But she showed Appleton photographs of herself in hiking attire and contrived to be near the door when he left at night so that they might go to the car together.

Kate Ogilvie, who was nearer Appleton's own age, discussed economic questions with him, particularly serfdom, but did not approve of his solution of state endowment of motherhood, fearing that it might lead to a worse serfdom still. They talked over this and kindred topics, and discovered they had much in common. He took her to shows on several occasions. . . . Once they had supper together . . . on one of their outings they met Bobby.

Bobby asked Kate quite frankly at the first opportunity if there was anything serious between her and Mr. Appleton, as she herself was getting very fond of him. Besides, Bobby understood from something Kate had once said, that she was interested in "somebody 'back East'."—But she really wasn't. "Nothing at all, Bobby," said Kate cheerily. "Go ahead, my dear. I wish you luck."

Although generous, Bobby did not see very deeply into things, and she told Appleton at the first opportunity. It did settle him. He was inclined to disbelieve it, and thought Kate was trying to be funny about his hurt. He got his chance in the "movies" soon after this, and made rapid headway. They heard he was doing well. He found a place for Bobby after a time, first as an extra, and then in a minor part. She had some natural talent and she worked hard. And after a time, things having become so very different, Bobby fell in love with a camera man and married him.

Whether or not Appleton was greatly concerned is difficult to ascertain at this time. He was greatly engrossed in the career that lay ahead of him. A somewhat piquant situation was unexpectedly created by his old love, suddenly left a rich young widow, coming out to look for him and forgiveness. It was not to be had at any price, but inadvertently she gave him full particulars about how she had not put the case quite properly to Molly Molloy—had in fact cherished some hope that what had actually happened might take place, for she had been aware that the elderly editor was delicate. But Appleton had been so bitter to his anger that she did not like to explain, and so had blamed everything on Molly Molloy.

"The trouble with you, Kate," said Appleton soon after, taking hold of her chin and turning her face to his. "is that with all your knowledge of affairs of the heart, and your supposed deep understanding of their workings, you have missed one very fundamental principle, namely, that a man can very rarely be 'winded' off from one woman to another. Why didn't you tell me you were Molly Molloy—especially as you had a clear case—?"

"I didn't know how you might take it," she said, her eyes dropping. "The clear case might have been difficult to establish. I didn't want to lose your respect. . . . And so . . ."

"And so you did the foolish thing?" he suggested, looking her.

"Yes," she replied, with wonderful meekness for so self-confident and crafty a person.

To Reduce to Minimum Illiteracy in U. S. A.

The Americanism commission at national headquarters of the American Legion is making a determined fight to reduce to a minimum illiteracy in the United States. The commission has been battling this menace in America through its American education week, held annually through presidential proclamation. Since it was inaugurated in 1921, the United States has come up from the eleventh in illiteracy among the enlightened nations, to ninth.

As regards illiteracy in the United States, Garland W. Powell, director of the Americanism commission and a member of the national illiteracy commission of the United States, revealed the following information:

"Figures based on actual tests show that one out of every sixteen persons over ten years of age in the United States cannot read or write; 6 per cent of the population of our country over ten years of age have had no schooling whatever, and 4,881,906 persons in the United States over ten admit that they cannot write—how many did not admit it?"

"Approximately one out of every four men drafted and examined for military service during the World war was illiterate."

"We spend over seventeen times more for luxuries in our nation than we do for education. In 1923, in 261 cities of 5,000 population or more, there was reported a shortage of more than 300,000 seats in the schools."

"The Americanism commission in connection with its American education work made it a point to enlighten the public to these portentous conditions in the hope that the level of illiteracy in the United States may be lowered through education. In our American education week we set aside a day known as 'Illiteracy day,' at which time all interested organizations and agencies considered illiteracy problems and took constructive steps to stimulate that menace in this country."

Battered Ship Reaches Port

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Norfolk, Va., Dec. 11.—The worst battered ship that has made this port in a long time reached Hampton Roads early today. It was the schooner Bluebird, towed into the harbor by the coast guard cutter Modoca of Wilmington, N. C., and Seneca of New York.
Out of food, her sails and masts torn away by the tornado of November 22 and her rudder gone, the vessel drifted helplessly for days. The cutters reached her last week. The crew was then living on nothing but salt fish.
The Bluebird has a valuable cargo of mahogany logs. It was bound from Barbados to Boston. Her skipper, Captain E. Bonomi, was the only white man aboard. His crew of 16 were negroes.

Wants to Buy New Paltz Stock

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Albany, Dec. 11.—The Central Hudson Gas & Electric Company of Poughkeepsie has filed an application with the public service commission for permission and authority to purchase the entire capital stock of the Electric Light Company of New Paltz, and to acquire the franchise, electric generating and distributing system in the town of Stamford, Dutchess county, owned by Abram H. Haight, Charles L. Haight and Lillian Haight. It is desired to merge the New Paltz company with the Central Hudson Company.

The stock of the New Paltz Company is owned by Peter A. Burnes of Poughkeepsie. It is stated in the petition that the present facilities and operating plant of the New Paltz Company are inadequate and insufficient to properly supply electric energy to its consumers, and the operation of its system as an independent unit is uneconomical. The system of the Central Hudson Company is conveniently situated for the operation of the plant of the New Paltz Company in conjunction with its own, and for many years the Central Hudson has supplied the electrical requirement of the New Paltz Company which has no independent generating plant, the petition states.

It is claimed that the operation of the combined facilities of the two companies will be more economical and for the best interests of the electrical needs of the community.

In the petition for consent to the transfer of the Haight plant it is stated that the owners desire to sell and retire from the business. It is also stated that the owners do not have the capital available to meet the requirements of the economical operation of the properties and to make the necessary extensions and betterments. The Hights hold a franchise in the town of Stamford.

At the head of the lake he beached his boat and hung himself down on the grass for a long meditation as to the fate of his heroine. So engrossed did he become that he awakened to realities by discovering that the sun had gone down a long time ago. In fact, it was almost too dark to locate his boat.

He did locate it at last, but before he had reached the large island which was his landmark it was almost pitch dark. With much difficulty and many wrong turns, at last he reached the shore and saw the cottage loom up in the darkness.

It was still darker inside, and as he stretched out his hand to find the lamp he struck it against a piece of furniture which he did not remember having left in that position beside the door. He felt his fingers close upon a watch. But his own watch was in his pocket. He felt for a match hastily, struck it—and suddenly perceived a young lady dressed in a Japanese kimono who stood in the other doorway, looking at him.

He had blundered into the wrong cottage.

The match flared out as the wind rushed in. Too embarrassed to speak, Richard turned for the door and hurried into the darkness. As he did so he heard the girl scream, and a moment later lights began to flicker in the adjacent cottages.

He stumbled down toward the lake. But again fate was against him. He could not find his boat. He searched in the undergrowth, caught himself in tangled vines, ran into trees; all in vain. He could not find a boat where he thought he had left one.

There was nothing to do but to make for home. Happily he now had a fair sense of his location, and, more happily still, he knew that, once he was beyond the farthest cottage, the country round the lake was open. There was a broad trail, in fact, which led almost to his own door. He had just reached the confines of the trees when he heard shouts behind him.

It takes a man of more than ordinary courage to explain himself under such conditions. Dick ran as fast as he could go without unduly betraying his whereabouts. As he ran he heard his pursuers following him.

"He's in those trees," he heard one yell to another.

"Got your pistol, Burt?"

"Sure! I'm not taking any chances with the man that robbed Mills' place last week!"

"What did he do?"

"Broke into Mills'—The voices died away and Richard redoubled his pace.

It was a long distance, and when at last he reached his cottage he was exhausted from his wild plunge through the undergrowth, while his coat was badly torn by briars. He threw off his clothes and tumbled into bed, to fall into an uneasy slumber for an hour or two. When he awoke the sun was just rising above the trees.

Dwight put on his clothes and was amazed to see how torn they were. Black marks from tree branches speckled his coat, almost like the hairs of a cat's back. He walked down to the water's edge and stood there, wondering how he could explain to the girl without admitting that he was her personal thief.

His position was to be solved very quickly, for at that moment a boat containing three men and the girl in question shot from under the trees and pushed into the bank. The men

DURING VISITING HOURS

By H. M. EGBERT

(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"IF YOU want a quiet place to go and write your novel this summer, you'd better let me send you to my bungalow on Otter lake," said Mrs. Temple. "There are a number of cottages on the east shore, but only one on the west, and that's mine, so you can write to your heart's content and nobody will interfere with you. But I'm sorry you won't be here when my niece May comes home from California," she continued, with a twinkle in her eyes.

Mrs. Temple was an old friend of Richard Dwight's family, an eccentric, middle-aged woman, with a shrewd mind, a sharp tongue, and a kind heart. Richard, whose first book, "The Rapids," had placed him beyond the need of finding employment, had not seen her in several years, her unannounced visits having always coincided with his own absence.

"Most young men would rather meet a pretty girl than go off into the woods alone," she continued, "but you authors are a class apart, I suppose."

A week later Richard was installed in Mrs. Temple's bungalow. It was luxuriously furnished, and the rental was only just enough to free him from the sense of obligation. He planned to spend a pleasant summer there with his work.

Otter lake was a winding body of water, and the presence of numerous small islands made it difficult for a newcomer to find his way about it. Richard spent his first afternoon inspecting its shores in his boat. There were, indeed, nearly a dozen cottages on the east shore, and he frowned as he heard the tinkle of banjos, shouts of mirth and general signs of those noisy activities in which summer folks delight. However, he would be lonely enough on his own side, he reflected.

At the head of the lake he beached his boat and hung himself down on the grass for a long meditation as to the fate of his heroine. So engrossed did he become that he awakened to realities by discovering that the sun had gone down a long time ago. In fact, it was almost too dark to locate his boat.

He did locate it at last, but before he had reached the large island which was his landmark it was almost pitch dark. With much difficulty and many wrong turns, at last he reached the shore and saw the cottage loom up in the darkness.

It was still darker inside, and as he stretched out his hand to find the lamp he struck it against a piece of furniture which he did not remember having left in that position beside the door. He felt his fingers close upon a watch. But his own watch was in his pocket. He felt for a match hastily, struck it—and suddenly perceived a young lady dressed in a Japanese kimono who stood in the other doorway, looking at him.

spring out, leaving the girl to hold the boat to the shore.

"Who are you, what are you doing here, and where do you live?" demanded one of the men.

"My name is Dwight. I am taking a stroll, and I live in Mrs. Temple's cottage over there," answered Richard.

"You're up early, Mr. Dwight, aren't you?" inquired the other.

"Yes. I like to get up early," said Dwight.

"Been having a walk through the woods perhaps?" the man continued, glancing at Dwight's coat. "Well, I'll be frank with you. This cottage was closed yesterday morning, because I came past here and saw it. There have been several robberies around here of late, and last night a lady's cottage was broken into and a gold watch taken. With or without your permission we are going to look for it." He turned to a friend. "Dill, you keep him here while I go through the cottage," he said. "Then perhaps, if we don't find what we want, he will consent to be searched. Don't let him get away."

The men departed on their mission, leaving Dwight a prisoner. He shrugged his shoulders and thrust his hands into his pockets. Then his nonchalance utterly disappeared, for his hand closed upon—the little watch and chain. He must have put them there in his confusion.

"I do hope you'll find my watch," said the girl, who had tied the boat to a tree and now came up. "It was a present from my grandfather, and I'd give anything to get it back."

"We'll do our best," answered Richard's captor.

The girl looked rather curiously at Richard. Then she drew the man a little way aside and whispered something. He shook his head; the girl persisted, placing her hands pleadingly upon his arms. Finally the man rather sulkily assented, and the girl came toward Richard.

"If you give me back my watch and chain you can go," she said.

Richard saw only one way out. He drew the lost articles from his pocket and put them in her hand.

"I didn't steal them, and it was a mistake," he said. "It was my first day here; I took the wrong side of the lake because the island confused me, and when I saw you I was so startled that I put them in my pocket. I don't suppose you'll believe me, but I can refer you to Mrs. Temple as to my character."

The party was coming back from the cottage.

"Nothing there," they called. They looked at Richard, and seemed to hesitate about repeating their request to search him. The cottage was certainly occupied by some one, and as certainly the occupant was not there. Perhaps the young man might have spoken the truth. But they looked at the coat stains and moved toward him.

"It's all right," said the girl cheerfully. "I've found it."

"You've found it, Miss Cameron?"

"It's very stupid of me. I put my watch in my chateleine and—here it is." And she opened the bag and showed the article in question, which, in fact, she had just transferred there.

The men looked at each other, and the man who had spoken with Miss Cameron looked at Richard. He suspected something, he did not know quite what, but—well, there was nothing more to be done.

"We must apologize," said one of them, rather glumly. "Since the watch and chain are found of course there is nothing more."

They went down to the boat, and just as the girl was about to embark, she left them and came running back to Richard.

"I want to tell you I believe you, Mr. Dwight," she said. "And I hope you've learned a lesson."

"I certainly have," said Richard. "Next time I take a wrong turn in the dark—"

"Oh, I don't mean that sort of a lesson," answered the girl, and Richard saw that her eyes were twinkling. Just as Mrs. Temple's had. "I mean, not to go off into the woods when you have the chance of staying at home and meeting—meeting me!"

"You are Mrs. Temple's niece?" exclaimed Richard in astonishment.

"What a fool I was not to remember your name! Why—"

So Mrs. Temple must have sent him there without telling him that the pretty niece was at Otter lake also! Wasn't that just like her?

"I happened to have your photograph which auntie sent me," she continued. "That's how I knew who you were. And now that you have found the way to my cottage—"

"I may come again?"

"During visiting hours," she said, laughing.

"Miss Cameron!" called her friends. "Have you lost anything?"

"No. I've found it now," she called back, and departed with a smile which made Richard realize that he had lost something, at any rate.

Would he find it again? He determined to try with all his might, even though it involved many visits to the other side of Otter lake, and though the novel suffered in consequence.

And, when the summer ended, he had found it again. At least, of said the announcement in the newspapers.

Famous Ancient Wine
Falerian was one of the favorite wines of the Romans, so called from Mount Falerian, the district in which it was grown, in the northern portion of Campagna, between the Maritima hills and the northern bank of the Volturnus. It is described by Horace as, in his time, surpassing all other wines in reputation.

Financial and Commercial

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Dec. 11.—The flood gates of speculative selling were opened in full force on the stock exchange today in a greater outpouring of stocks than in yesterday's selling movement. Prices tumbled quite generally all over the board with some of the industrial leaders showing losses in the maximum of 5 or 6 points.

As in yesterday's session, the entering wedge came with the dislodgment of the oil stocks which dropped again, near the low prices of the year.

Bearish traders made good use of the opportunities presented to jump on the stocks in which they were working for a decline. The financial district was filled with rumors and misleading statements with respect to the possibility of an increase in the redempt rate of the Federal Reserve Bank at the meeting to be held at the close of the market. The bears offered huge blocks of industrial stocks at concessions from current prices and concentrated their attacks on stocks which have been the leaders in previous transactions. In contrast with the last few sessions the pace of the market increased rather than decreased with the decline in prices and the bears appeared to have everything their own way.

Forward movements in Utah Securities, American Water Works and other stocks which featured the market in the first period, were brushed aside. American Can sold down to 144 1/4 for a loss of over 2 points; Cast Iron Pipe at 133 1/4 was down 5 points; United States Steel lost 1 1/4 at 115 1/4; and General Electric was down 3 at 270 1/4. There was a sudden halt in the rally in copper and motor stocks which sustained the market in the three previous sessions of the week, though these stocks were inactive rather than weak while the storm was passing over.

Industrial reports were generally favorable. Additional extra dividend gave evidence of the profitable nature of the operations of many large corporations. Call money loaned at 3 1/2 per cent; grains were somewhat irregular, cotton markets steady but inactive.

Six Meetings
For Dairymen

Professor Crandall of New York State College of Agriculture to Address Ulster County Dairymen On How to Pull Production Cost Down.

Ulster county members of the Ulster County Farm Bureau have received the following communication from Manager F. M. Wigsten:

Dear Sir:

Your county agent, the State College at Ithaca and the League and all other farmers organizations know that the present milk prices and cost of production prices are too nearly equal. It is humanly possible to pull these two prices apart a good stiff effort should be made. This can be done in two ways, raise milk prices up or pull production cost down. ## K. H. S. Eleven

Annual K. H. S. Football Banquet At

Y. M. C. A. Wednesday—Results of Basketball Games.

Wednesday evening at the Y. M.

C. A. the Hi-Y club of the local high school entertained the K. H. S.

varsity football squad at the annual football banquet Emerson Davis and Harry Burnhart, both of whom received broken ankles during the football season were back with their teammates to enjoy this annual event.

After supper, Winston, president of the Hi-Y Club, opened the meeting with a short talk. In behalf of the

Hi-Y Club Winston expressed the great honor they felt in entertaining such a sportsmanlike team and the team which won such a decisive victory over Poughkeepsie this fall.

Winston then introduced Mr.

Dumim, head coach of the K. H. S.

eleven. Mr. Dumim said that he and the team considered it a great honor to be guests of the Hi-Y Club. He also expressed the appreciation of the team for the fine way in which the

Hi-Y Club has entertained visiting teams this fall.

Principal Van Lugen spoke of the fine way in which this year's football team had upheld the traditions of K. H. S. He also congratulated the

Hi-Y for its cooperation. Members of the team were then called upon.

President Winston then introduced

Leslie Mann of the Boston Braves.

Coach of Springfield College football, basketball and baseball teams, and an all around man. Mr. Mann built his speech around the well-known incident in the Bible. Daniel in the lions' den. Mr. Mann asked his audience to think of Daniel as representing an athlete and the lions as representing the six Cardinal sins which athletes have to face. First, the lion of fear; second, the lion of lust; third, the lion of jealousy;

fourth, the lion of hate; fifth, the lion of deceit; sixth, the lion of revenge.

Mr. Mann went on to say that it is only through the spirit of love, not the mollycoddle love, but the love for God, that an athlete can overcome these cardinal sins.

At the close of Mr. Mann's speech

Dick Haseley led cheers for Coach

Dumim and Benson, Captain Goldberg, Captain-elect Simmonette, for every member of the team and, lastly for Mr. Mann. Those present then

Foul In Final Seconds Drops Kingston Into Fourth Place—Davey's

Work Very Poor In Important

Stages.

The Kingston quintet, Referee

Davey and the Greenpoint outfit all connected with the Metropolitan

League staged a fracas at the armory court Wednesday evening, worthy of mention in some details.

Greenpoint got the decision in the last seconds to go, when Norman caged a foul, putting his team in front of a 29 to 23 tally.

Davey's work throughout the melee looked foolish at times, but his judgment in the final seconds, calling a foul on Campbell for the reprehensible act, he termed walking with the ball, after Campbell was tackled about the neck and thrown into the net, changed the usual calm of the customers. The award at this time settled the is-west of the Greenpoint was by far the worst offenders, Davey calling 31 fouls on the visitors and 22 on

Kingston.

The Greenpointers put up a hard game, playing rough, but coming out with the honors of a brilliant defense. Davey also had a taste of the roughness.

In the opening session the Cogan outfit got away to an early start and was leading at half time 15 to 11.

Beginning the second period Carey and Norman each caged a double, going further into the lead. This edge of eight points was not for long as the locals spurted, with Campbell at the helm and soon the score was tied. Campbell Englished a couple of fields that was unique.

In the closing minutes the lead changed hands a number of times, with the Greenpointers fortunate in getting the last chance from the foul line. All told it was a "battle royal."

As a result of the game last evening the Kingston team no longer holds the lofty position at the head of the league but is now sitting, not so prettily, in fourth. It is hardly likely that the locals will come out of this place this week, as on Saturday the Morgenweckers go to Green-point.

The score:

Kingston.
